Zollars by J. H. Reigner.

The eleventh annual reunion of the descendants of George and Margaret Miller was held on Thursday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Gould, 1013 West Tuscarawas street. The next reunion will be held at the residence of Andrew Miller, half a mile south of Reed Urban.

There have been six deaths in the Miller family the past year: A little son of Mrs. Ella Balloff, Harry Carr; Cyrus Zollars, Jennie Miller, Charles Schondel and Wilbur Miller.

There were also six births: A son to Mr. and Mrs. Bender, a son to Mr. and Mrs. John Karrer, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Perry Doll, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Buras, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Deardark, and a daughter to Mrs. Ida Garver.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Gould for the elaborate dinner which they prepared for the guests.

The speech of J. H. Reigner, which was a eulogy on the late Cyrus Zollars, is by request, printed in full, and is as follows:

"Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

When a good citizen passes out of the thronging multitudes which make up our intense modern life, it is too often the case that little heed is paid to the loss which the public has sustained.

Our people are prone to shower eulogies on men of wealth, intelligence and political distinction, but the plain citizen is sadly neglected in this respect. The public seem to think that only the wealthy, the intelligent and those prominent in political affairs are worthy of eulogies, but I want to say that the man who lives a noble and virtuous life, who renders unto his fellow man his just due, who lives to resist the wrong and assist the right, is just as useful a man in his community and in his state as the man who is envied for his wealth, honored for his intelligence and respected for his political renown.

Such a man is to the body politic what the private soldier is to the victorious army, and like the private soldier, he frequently passes into oblivion before the flowers upon his tomb have withered, as though he never existed, while others of less personal worth and integrity are lauded with the most touching tributes of pen and tongue, because they happened to occupy a higher station in life.

"Such is the case with Cyrus Zollars, who passed from this world to the world beyond on the 13th of April, 1896. Of all his numerous friends, no one who knew him long and intimately would count any word or eulogy too extravagant which I may utter concerning him. It is no more just to the dead than it is useful to the living, that before the memory of his genial personality shall grow indistinct, some mention should be made of what he was to those who knew him best, and what his influence was in this community, where, for sixty years, he lived an unblemished life, and set an example of public-spirited devotion to everything true and high, whether as husband, brother, friend, or citizen. How many genuine friendships he enjoyed was manifested in part by the throngs who stood outside on the ample porch of his house, unwilling to deprive themselves of testifying by their presence at his funeral, the great regard in which they held him. It is not because he was of exceptional rectitude or generosity that I speak of him here today at this reunion, but rather because he was the best type of that sturdy manliness of character and loyal faithfulness to the instincts of high and generous manhood which should always command our appreciative respect.

"The legend of St. Humbert is, that that good man was buried with a green branch lying upon his breast, and when, a hundred years afterward, they chanced to open his grave, they found that the body had become dust, but the fair branch, unwithered, still kept its perennial green. So it is with good men. They die and their bones turn to ashes, but long in the hearts of their friends, the memories of the good they wrought, a tide imperishable. For though dead, they do live again. Their lives live after them. And it is well to speak of them, for they are men who, when dead, still live to make the next age better than the last. The lives of many people are happier and the world better because of Cyrus Zollars' life.

"Death," says a German philosopher, "spares neither the rose nor the thistle, nor does he forget the solitary blade of grass in the distant waste. He crushes to dust, plants and beasts, men and their works. Even the Egyptian pyramids are trophies of his power." To the monarch upon the throne, as the beggar at the palace gates; to the statesman crowned with honors as to the lowliest of his countrymen; to the scholar, the scientist and the sage as to the unlettered serf; to the rich and powerful as to the poor and the oppressed; to all classes and conditions of men there is this common event in respect to which no man hath any advantage of his fellows, and which none may hope to escape by postponement to a day certain or indefinitely. It is always an unwelcome guest, and it comes usually when we least expect it. The sunshine of today gives way to the shadows of tomorrow.

The joys of the present are supplanted by the sorrows of the future. This is the mysterious lesson of life and death, of time and eternity.

"Cyrus Zollars was born in Harrison county, Ohio, while James Madison was yet president of the United States. His ancestors on both sides were of German origin and some of them were soldiers in the Revolutionary war. His parents, John and Frances Zollars, emigrated to Harrison county from Washington county Pa., in the year 1815. Cyrus was the fifth in a family of ten children, of which seven were boys and three were girls. The Zollars family were noted for their longevity, and it is doubtful if they are rivaled in Ohio or in the country in this respect. Think of a family of seven children whose ages, six years ago, aggregated 527 years, or an average age of over 75. They were like that many sturdy oaks in a primeval forest that withstood the storms and blasts for nearly a century. Four of them celebrated their golden weddings and some of them were among the very few years of their diamond wedding anniversary when they were summoned by the great Commander to answer roll-call in the other world. Are we irreverent, then, when we say that God, in his infinite wisdom, allowed this remarkable family, noted for their generosity, courage, humanity, patriotism, chivalry and honesty, to remain longer upon earth than probably any others of his children, because He knew that they lived for the benefit of their fellow man and all the good that they could do.

"In the year 1836 he removed with his parents to a farm four miles south of Canton. Stark county was not the earthly paradise then, that it is now. There were less people then scattered over its 570 miles of area than there are today between the two branches of the Nishmillen in Canton. Stark county was then a howling wilderness, and the man whose memory we commemorate today was one of our forefathers who sought to reclaim it from the savagery of nature. He belonged to that class of pioneers whose physical bravery knew no fear and whose moral heroism was sublime.

"In 1842, at 25, he found the crowning blessing of his life in the affectionate devotion and genial companionship of his loving wife. She was faithful to every obligation and cheerful in the discharge of every duty that affection, humanity or religion could impose. Her tender sympathies supported him in the dark hours of sorrow and her loving countenance, that was always by his side during his last hours on earth, was to him like a gleam of sunshine piercing its way through a beclouded sky.

"To speak of him in any manner calls forth the pleasant memories of eleven years ago, when I first came to this county. By him and through him the struggle in life was made easy for me. He impressed me as a man wholly free from guile. A strong friendship grew up between us, and I often sought his society and derived from it great satisfaction and pleasure. He was the kindest of all kind men I ever met. I remember upon one occasion, we drove to town. He always had a certain place on the public square to tie his horse. The streets were crowded that day with vehicles, and I suggested that we tie the horse away from the public square, wherever a vacant spot could be found. His answer was, 'Better drive up to the place where I always tie. There are some parties here who always use my buggy when I am in town, and if you tie down here, they will not be able to find it.' Kindness! Where can another parallel case of such unstinted generosity be found?

"That he had no errors I will not say. But he was always ready to admit them. Who that lives is exempt from frailty? But let it be remembered, that the grave buries every error, covers every defect, extinguishes every remembrance, and from its peaceful bosom springs none but fond regrets and tender recollections. One of his most frequent errors, if such, indeed, it can be called, was to err on the side of mercy as against justice, and that is a good side to err on. This poor human nature of ours, discipline as we may, will still refuse to stand in perfect poise. 'He who boasts of being perfect, is perfect in folly.' Every polished shaft has its flaw; every rose has its thorn; every day has its night.

"The Thracians brought tears to the birth couch and flowers to the tomb. They held that life was most blessed in its ending, but in that age there were few masters and many bondmen, and life was sorrowful in its burdens. In our happier and better civilization garlands come to the cradle and to the grave, and life may be blessed alike in its morning, its noonday and its evening time. The great life that illumines its pathway by achievement, however richly blessed in its career, is ever richly blessed when its work is finished, and while the loss of Cyrus Zollars may weaken the ties of earth, the gain will more than correspondingly strengthen the attractions of heaven.

"Two weeks ago I visited Westlaw, and as I stood beside his grave, I could see in my imagination his lustreless eye and his strong, beautiful features. Nor could I forget the fact that his character was so lofty, that nature might stand up and say to all the world: this was a man!"

"Our friend is dead. He has been gathered like a ripened sheaf into the garner of the eternal world. Peace to his ashes, reverence to his memory, honor to his name."

MEDICAL SKILL

WOULD NOT AVOID TO PROLONG HER LIFE.

Mrs. Stauffer Succumbs to Nervousness Which Finally Causes Her Death—Sad Ending of a Beautiful and Useful Life.

The many Cantons who know Mrs. Olive Holm Stauffer, wife of Mr. Isaac W. Stauffer, of No. 126 Aultman avenue, will be pained to learn of her death after but a short illness under the most sad and unfortunate circumstances. Overcome by the effects of her mother's illness, Mrs. Stauffer was finally prostrated with nervousness a few days since, and her condition rapidly assumed the most serious aspects. Tuesday morning Mrs. Stauffer took her wife to one of the best hospitals in Toledo, hoping that through the treatment of experts her life could be saved. Leaving her in the best of care, Mr. Stauffer started for Canton last evening at 9 o'clock, arriving at 3 this morning. A telegram awaited him here and stated that Mrs. Stauffer had died at 10 o'clock, one hour after he left.

Together with his brother-in-law, Mr. R. W. McCaughey, of Massillon, Mr. Stauffer started for Toledo on the first morning train and the remains of the deceased will be brought to Canton Friday morning.

Mrs. Stauffer was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Holm, well known residents of this city. She was married about four years ago to Mr. Isaac W. Stauffer, book-keeper of the Repository Printing Company, and the union was a most happy one. She was prominent in Methodist church circles and her womanly and modest manners won for her the admiration of a host of friends, making her one of the most popular of Canton's ladies.

The direct cause of Mrs. Stauffer's illness, was, as previously stated, worry over the condition of her mother, Mrs. Holm. The latter is at present confined to her bed, and it was not thought best to break the sad news to her until this afternoon.

THOMAS PATTON

Succumbs to Old Age and Numerous Ailments, Passing Peacefully Away.

Mr. Thomas Patton, an old resident of this county, died at 7 o'clock this morning at the home of his son-in-law, Edward Meyer. The weakness of old age caused his death, which was hastened by minor ailments. He was sitting in a chair at the moment of his death, and he died suddenly and quietly.

Mr. Patton was one of a family of six. Of these, there are now living but two, Mr. John Patton, the well known feed merchant, of South Market street, and Mrs. Dr. Biglow, of Carrollton. The latter has been notified of her brother's death; but as she is ill she may not be able to attend the funeral. In this case her daughter is expected from Carrollton.

Thomas Patton was born in 1811, in Massillon, and was, therefore, about 85 years of age. He had been a resident of this county most, if not all, of his long life. He held several minor public offices and during the war was provost marshal. By occupation he was a merchant, but has not been engaged in business for a number of years. At one time he was in the dry goods business with his brother, John Patton. Subsequently he was in the hardware business. But of late years the burdens of old age have disqualified him from active business. He has been living of late with his daughter, Mrs. Meyer, and her husband. This daughter, Mrs. Edward Meyer, and his son, George M. Patton, are the only ones of his large family of children now resident in Canton. There are others, however, of whom one is a jeweler in Cleveland.

Mr. Patton was widely known in Canton, of which he had been so long a prominent and substantial citizen.

S. L. DOUGLAS

Of Mansfield, Nominated For Circuit Judge of the Fifth Judicial District.

The Democratic convention, called for the nomination of a candidate for circuit judge in the fifth judicial district, met yesterday at Coshocton. Fifteen counties were represented by delegations. W. J. Piero called the convention to order, after which it was permanently organized with L. W. Houck, of Mt. Union, as chairman, and J. H. Sponseller, of Canton, as secretary.

Nominations were called for. S. L. Douglas, of Mansfield; Judge J. H. Mitchell, of Tuscarawas county; and Gill, of Delaware county, were nominated. The speech of Judge A. W. Patrick, of Tuscarawas county, who nominated J. H. Mitchell, was particularly forcible and striking. Three ballots were held. On the first ballot, Douglas led, Stark county giving ten votes to Mitchell and dividing the remaining five. On the second ballot Stark gave its entire vote to Mitchell. On the third ballot, Stark voting as on the second, Wayne county voted nominated Douglas. All the other counties except Tuscarawas, voted for Douglas.

IMPORTANT MATTERS

ANNUAL U. B. CONFERENCE.

Now In Session In This City—Bishop Mills Preaches a Fine Sermon Last Evening—Resolution Regarding Incorporation Passed.

The eleventh annual session of the East Ohio Conference of the United Brethren in Christ church, is now being held in the First United Brethren church in this city. The conference is presided over by Bishop J. S. Mills, D. D., of Eugene, Ore., the youngest bishop in the church, having been chosen at the last general conference. He called the convention to order at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Prof. R. C. Ward, has charge of the music, and his new book, "The Tidal Wave," is in use. He announced "Rock of Ages." Presiding Elder D. W. Sprinkle, of Ashland, made the opening prayer and the bishop read from the word of God.

Rev. William Williamson then greeted the visiting pastors, delegates and friends, in a pleasing manner.

The roll of the conference, was called and showed fifty-seven ministers and fourteen lady delegates present. Many more have since arrived.

J. H. Miller, of New Rumley, was chosen secretary, and W. B. Leggett, of Massillon, assistant.

Presiding Elder J. F. Shepherd, Ph. D., moved that a committee be appointed to arrange for a visit to Major McKinley. Rev. J. F. Shepherd, F. M. Corl and Mr. G. G. Barnett was the committee appointed. George S. Stage, J. E. Graham, Charles D. Watson and Charles Fox were recommended for license to preach. The bishop appointed his committees for the session.

Dr. William Bell, of Dayton, general secretary of the board of missions, preached at the morning session. Rev. W. R. Funk, of Allegheny conference, assisted in the services.

Rev. C. Whitney conducted the devotions Thursday morning. Elder W. O. Siffert reported for the East district. Elder D. W. Sprinkle reported for the North district, and showed his district to be in good condition. West district was reported by Elder J. F. Shepherd, Ph. D., and this district was found to be in good condition.

The roll of local preachers was revised; transfers were granted to H. D. Barnhouse and D. Arbaugh.

The report of pastors was taken up and consumed the balance of the forenoon. Announcements were made and conference adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

At the Thursday afternoon session of the U. B. Conference, the report of the pastors was continued. Upon motion, the report of pastors was suspended and Dr. Bell was granted time for a missionary rally. Dr. Bell is always interesting on the subject of missions, but this effort was unusually so, as he gave a very entertaining talk upon Japan, which he recently visited and established a new mission, one of the most hopeful of the church.

By means of prepared charts he gave a comprehensive and interesting report of the missions in Germany and Japan. He certainly is a Bell with a fine jingle.

D. R. Miller, manager of Union Biblical Seminary, of Dayton, was granted an advisory seat, and in invited to address the conference, speaking briefly of the interests of that school of the prophets.

Professor Zuck, of Otterbein college, was introduced to the conference, and granted an advisory seat. The report of pastors was again taken up. Rev. Mr. Henning, of the Reformed church, was introduced to the conference. Announcements were made and the conference adjourned.

Thursday evening the large auditorium of the church was packed with an appreciative audience to hear Bishop Mills preach. He chose for his text Mark 9:21: "But Jesus took him by the hand and lifted him up and he arose." A brief synopsis of the sermon follows:

"This stands connected with the Transfiguration Scene. This double scene of the glory of Christ and his devotion to the welfare of suffering humanity was portrayed by Raphael in his last work. The church has hitherto spent most of its time in the delightful fellowship of the company on the top of the mountain, and like Peter, has sought to always stay there. But the real mission of the church is down in the valley, lifting up the man who is down.

"In the life of Christ there was one transfiguration scene, but there were a thousand scenes of help for the fallen. On the mountain for inspiration among the people who are down for service.

"The church is now trying to solve the problems of the pauper, the defective and the criminal classes. There are a million and a half of these in the United States: First, study the causes of these abnormal persons: (1) The influence of heredity; (2) The influence of environment; (3) The influence of personal vocation. Second, study the remedies: (1) Legal remedies; (2) Educational remedies; (3) Churchly remedies; (4) Individual efforts. Third, guiding principles: Help the man who is down: (1) In a friendly spirit; (2) So as to restore self-respect; (3) So as to give a new ideal of life; (4) So as to awaken self-activity. Study these social problems and help to save men from the evils of the life that now is."

Friday morning, devotions were conducted by J. D. Wyandt. The roll was called and minutes read and approved. G. L. Graham, Charles Bach and J. B. Kirsch were recommended as suitable persons for educational aid.

The following resolution was presented by P. M. Camp:

"Be it resolved, That for more thorough work and organization and efficiency for Christ, we, in annual conference, proceed to incorporate East Ohio Conference, and that this annual conference proceed to the election of a board of trustees (five) for the same, with instructions that said board proceed at the earliest moment to adopt and obtain articles of incorporation."

After a thorough discussion of the question by Agent W. J. Shury, Dr. Miller and others, the resolution was agreed to. William Williamson moved to instruct the committee on boundaries and finances to provide for but one presiding elder district instead of three as at present obtains. After a spirited discussion the motion was lost. The expatriation of pastors' reports was proceeded with.

Reva. E. P. Herbruck, of the Reformed church, and Rev. Mr. Harpster, of the United Evangelical church, were introduced to the conference.

General Evangelist Ward made his report. Conference Evangelists Jennie Metzgar and Mattie Mumma made their report. Committee on applicants recommended G. S. Stage, C. J. Fox, and J. E. Graham be granted license to preach, and the recommendations prevailed.

The committee on boundaries and finances reported, which report was adopted in part, and upon motion of F. M. Corl, the report was referred back to the committee, with instructions to change all names of circuits so as to make them bear the name of some postoffice. Announcements were made and the conference adjourned until 1:30.

THE GRIP OF GOLD.

The following appeared in the London Financial News in March last:

The financial situation in the United States is very serious. The Senate has blocked all relief measures proposed by President Cleveland, and Congress is at a dead standstill on the money question.

The free coinage senators are masters of the situation.

The condition of affairs in the United States Congress demands the immediate attention of British financiers and statesmen. The trade of the world is now in our hands, but it will not long remain there if the United States goes to a bimetallic basis with free and unlimited coinage of silver.

With the addition of silver to the volume of money, everything in America would take on a new face; labor and industry would gain new life. The grip of the gold standard on the products of the world would be loosened and prices would rise. Great Britain would lose her markets in South America, Asia and Europe, and American ships would not be long in capturing the carrying trade of the world.

British creditors must now apply themselves quickly to the American money problem. The sound money men and banking interests, led by Senator Sherman, Cleveland and Carlisle, with a plentiful supply of means, have been beaten.

The American people are now thoroughly aroused and educated on the power and use of money, and made desperate by debt and business depression, they are forcing free silver as the main issue.

Great Britain need fear no injury to her trade or investments if the Republican party can force "protection tariff" as the main issue in the coming Presidential campaign, but if free silver dominates the American mind and carries at the polls, it will bring about a change in England that will be ruinous from its suddenness and severity. The damage that can be done British manufacturers by the protective tariff is slight compared with the disaster that would be entailed by a change from a single gold to a complete bimetallic standard.

It is evident that the Democratic party will not renominate a man who holds to President Cleveland's ideas on money, and the only hope for a continuation of Mr. Cleveland's financial policy will be in the success of the Republicans in the next election.

The success of free coinage will bring down the rate of interest on money and cause an immediate rise in the price of all commodities. When silver becomes primary money the American mines will pour their products into the mints, and a new era similar to that produced by the issue of greenbacks during the civil war will begin. Gold will leave the banks and enter into competition with silver in the avenues of trade, and the manufactures of the United States, which have been shut down or crippled since 1892, will again resume their fight for the English markets. It is doubtful whether the Republican party can be held much longer in check by spend money statesmen, as its adherents are divided by powerful factions. The Democratic party is also breaking up under the weight of the free silver agitation. It matters not to Great Britain which party succeeds if the gold standard is maintained, but either of the old parties or a new party which goes into power pledged to free coinage will be inimical and prejudicial to English manufactures and trade.

The American people eling with wonderful tenacity to party organization, but financial embarrassment and business stagnation has become too severe for their patience, and they are ready for any change that promises relief. They are becoming convinced that it cannot be found in the protection theory, as that has been tried, and they are musing now on free silver. When that issue comes fairly before the American people, England will regret her apathy and adherence to the single gold standard.

LOST HIS MONEY.

A Farmer Visits Canton and Goes Back Home With Less Money Than He Had.

Daniel Marks, a farmer from near Strasburg, Tuscarawas county, came to the city to do some marketing and Thursday evening started to see the sights of the city. Marks carried a few hay-needs and about $25, which he says he missed after going to sleep for a short time in a resort in the red-light district. He gave his watch to secure his board bill at the Numan hotel, and then left the city to return to his green pastures and ponder over the effects of getting gay in a big town.

HOUSE BREAKERS

Secure Some Money and Other Valuables by a Bold Piece of Work.

The home of Mrs. B. Fenz, at No. 78 South Cherry street, was yesterday afternoon entered by thieves who secured considerable spoils. The house breakers knocked out a pane of glass in the rear of the house and reached in and unlocked the door. The inmates were absent and the house was leisurely pillaged. Mrs. Fenz and E. Roll manage a small laundry and the proceeds of Saturday's work was placed in a bureau in the front room. The entire top of the bureau was pried off and $9 and a small quantity of jewelry stolen. The police are investigating.

What the Shakers of Mount Lebanon know more about than anybody else, is the use of herbs and how to be healthy. They have studied the power of food. They nearly all live to a ripe old age.
